La società della disinformazione (Italian Edition) Alessandro Elia

Ogni giorno i media forniscono notizie allarmanti riguardo a fatti di cronaca, eventi politici e tragedie sociali che turbano e dividono l'opinione pubblica. Informazioni che ci giungono immerse in un flusso continuo di rappresentazioni spettacolari di ciò che accade. Proprio sfruttando le possibilità interattive offerte dalle più recenti innovazioni tecnologiche, dal telecomando ai canali a pagamento alle varie forme di partecipazione che i programmi radiofonici e televisivi offrono al pubblico, questi media diffondono in realtà l'apatia, abituando l'utente a ricercare e subire un costante intrattenimento, a delegare al mezzo, agli opinionisti o cronisti di turno, ogni analisi dei temi trattati, sostituendo allo sforzo di ragionare la memorizzazione dei cliché più frequentemente ripetuti dai media, spingendo l'utente a vivere, in ultima analisi, il maggior tempo possibile, in una realtà mediatica, una seconda vita virtuale. Nel momento di massima espansione del sistema mediatico, l'informazione e la comunicazione pubbliche e private, divenute perni centrali del controllo sociale, subiscono, nel contempo, un grado di mercificazione, una sottomissione alle regole del mercato ed ai gruppi imprenditoriali che le controllano senza precedenti.
