This book is a photographic essay on Buenos Aires which describes the city in which people lead their lives. The author tries to understand what makes this city unique and how it parallels other megacities. The work borrows heavily from urbanism and architecture and, to a lesser extent, from sociology and history.

The book's chapters are Landscapes, Dwellings, Containers, Spaces, Flows, Nature and Suburbia. Clorindo Testa, an architect based in Buenos Aires, drew the foreword. Full Spanish and English text.
